How much water does golf use?
Golf courses in the United States use about 531 billion gallons of water a year, mostly for irrigating fairways, greens and roughs during the summer months.
Water use varies a great deal by region, climate and the type of grass planted.
Courses in the Southwest use far more water per acre than courses in the Northeast.